THE OTHER FACE OF THE WALL. THE ROLE 13 AUGUST 1961
PLAYED IN THE RELATIONS BETWEEN THE COUNTRIES FROM THE SOCIALISTIC CAMP AND GDR

(Summary)

After a well-founded research on the economical and political factors, which led to the erection of the Berlin Wall, the author reveals the consequent change in the attitude of the socialistic countries towards GDR, on the basis of document and research materials. She gives proof to the conclusion, that during the months and years after the building of the Wall, Eastern Berlin has difficulties receiving financial support from the socialistic capitals. When the last frontier with the West was sealed off the period of uncertainty for the GDR's governmental future was ended: a period, in which although the country has formally completed the integration in the Eastern block, the socialistic countries are still cautious and mistrustful.
